Mr. Carnegie's broad hint that he will instead of in Steel Trust bonds for the trust fund of the university for advanced scientific study suggests the approaching happy end to an unpleasant but unavoidable incident.

It was natural that Mr. Carnegie should offer the gift in the form in which all his gifts must of necessity be made—the form in which the bulk of his fortune is invested. It was natural that he should stipulate, as he had in the other gifts, that the bonds should be held for long period. A meeting has recently been held at Corcoran Hall, on Church Hill, which was well attended. The permanent or-ganization was then definitely decided on. When the meeting adjourned it is with the understanding that Mr. vaden would call them together in a short time, when permanent officers would be chosen. For a long time the dairymen, who supply the city with milk, have realized the advantages to be derived from an organization, where matters affecting all the milkmen might be discussed. The first meeting of dairymen was last fall, when the question of rais-ing the price of milk was before them. They all realized that if they acted at all they had to do so concertedly. It was at this meeting that they agreed to put the price of milk to seven cents a quart, where it was six cents before. At this very first meeting another matter was brought to their attention in which, too, by had to act concertedly. The drivers f the milk wagons wanted to be allowed make but one trip on Sunday, just as they do on helidays, such as Christmas Day and the Fourth of July. As there is no organization, the petition prepared by the drivers has never been acted upon. This paper is one of the first things haely to come before the body upon its per manent organization. One of the most prominent dairymen said to a Times writer last night that he did not see how the petition could be granted, as the cus-tomers would be apt to object to it, but that he was willing to do everything in his power to make the lot of the drivers less hard. This same dairyman said that the price of milk, in his opinion, would never get back to six cents, and the people had just as well make themselves contented to pay seven. Mr. Vaden will likely be president of the new organiza-
